Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

SITUATION SUMMARY

Northern California Weather of Concern

- Dry and warming weather is expected this week. Locally breezy north to east winds are anticipated during the middle of the week as high pressure rebuilds across the region. Daytime highs will be above normal Thursday through Saturday. A Freeze Warning is in effect overnight, tonight for portions of northeastern California, as crisp overnight lows will develop in many areas as winds subside and a cool, dry airmass allows efficient radiational cooling with the longer nights of autumn.

Southern California Weather of Concern

- A ridge of high pressure will build over Southern California Thursday through Sunday. This, in addition to offshore flow, will result in hot daytime temperatures and drier weather conditions through Sunday.

Week-Ahead Weather: Key Points

Thursday

- Potential for large fire growth and rapid spread as a hot, dry and windy offshore weather pattern develops (Ventura and Los Angeles Counties)
- Above normal temperatures across California inland valley regions

Friday - Sunday

- Much above normal to near record heat across inland valley regions. Heat related injuries or fatigue may occur, in particular, among at risk populations.
- Slightly elevation fire danger across Southern California.

Monday - Wednesday

- No significant hazards expected
- Cooling trend is forecast

See attachment for detailed National Weather Service briefing.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories: http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/wwwa_bc_cal.php

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

Dry and warm conditions will persist for the next several days as a strong ridge of high pressure settles over the region into the weekend.

San Francisco Weather:

Very warm to hot weather can be expected across our entire area through Friday as strong high pressure builds over California and offshore flow continues. Coastal areas will experience subtle cooling over the weekend as offshore flow weakens, but inland areas will continue to see very warm to hot conditions. Gradual cooling is then expected in all areas early next week as onshore flow redevelops.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

Dry and warm weather expected through next week under prominent high pressure ridge over the west coast. A slow warming trend through the weekend will transition to slightly cooler going in to next week. Breezy north winds over ridges and the northern Sacramento valley this morning will decrease this afternoon.

Hanford Weather:

A warming trend will continue into the weekend as high pressure builds over the area. Daytime high temperatures will reach 5 to 10 degrees above normal values today with this trend continuing into the first part of next week.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Santa Ana winds will strengthen this morning through early afternoon hours as surface high pressure continues to build into the interior. Hot, dry, and gusty northeast winds at times can be expected through Friday for parts of the area. Offshore flow will weaken over the weekend, but the hot weather will continue as high pressure builds aloft. A cooling trend is likely for early next week.

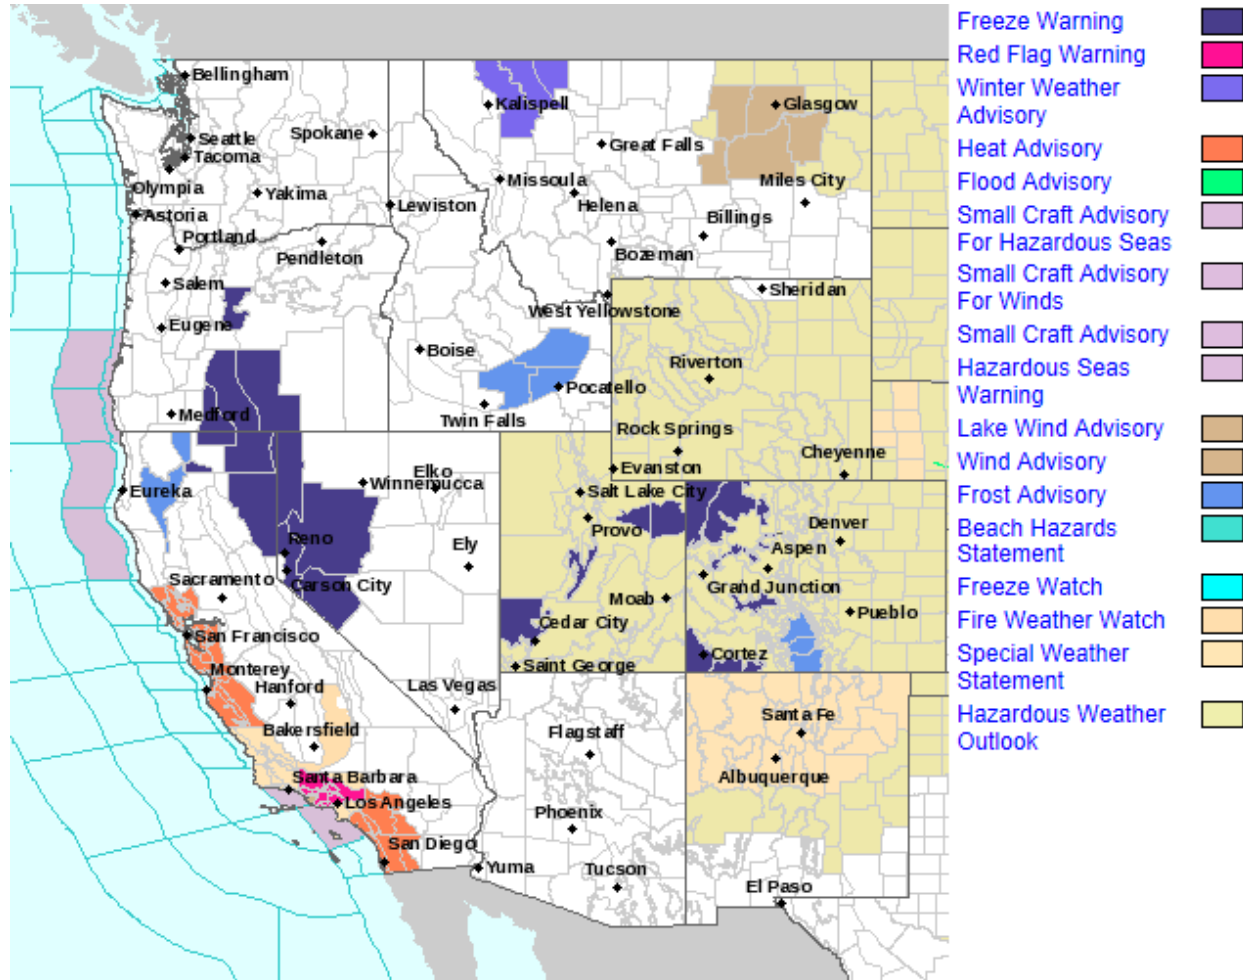

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Strong high pressure and offshore flow will bring strong winds to the mountains and valleys today with hot weather through Sunday. Temperatures will peak Saturday with readings 10 to 20 degrees above normal. A cooling trend will start with the new work week as onshore flow redevelops and brings some stratus again to the coast. Temperatures will then return to seasonal levels across the region for the remainder of next week.

Southeast California Weather:

A persistent high pressure ridge building into the region will lead to a warming trend for the rest of the week with above normal temperatures peaking on Saturday with very little change in temperatures for Sunday. Weakening high pressure next week will result in a very slow cooling trend towards more normal readings for early October.
